

Peter Probst

How I invented sex

296 pages
Euro 22,00 € (D)
published in August 2020
ISBN 978-3-95614-384-7

A few weeks ago, twelve year old Peter started collecting mysterious words in a notebook. 'Immaculate' and 'devotion' and 'conception'. He's an altar boy and as devout as his parents whom he can't ask about the meaning of these words. And he definitely can't ask them about the words he overheard adults and more knowledgeable classmates say. Words like 'fornication', 'sexual intercourse', or 'porn'. He decided that this has to change, he must solve the puzzle. Thank god there is a poster of Franz Joseph Strauss hanging above his bed, giving him important pieces of life advice.

With wit and humour Peter Probst tells about the impertinences of puberty and about how the revolt of an adolescence in the 70s breaks open the conservative milieu – to the adult's horror, to the reader's pleasure.

© Bernhard Haselbeck

Peter Probst

Peter Probst, born in Munich in 1957, studied German and Italian literature as well as catholic theology. Early on he began writing TV scripts for shows such as Tatort and has been awarded multiple prizes for his television plays. He wrote the non-fiction book Verliebt, verlobt ... verrückt? (Enamoured, Engaged...Insane?) together with his wife Amelie Fried with whom he lives in Munich. He most recently published the novel Wie ich den Sex erfand (How I Invented Sex, 2020).

Other titles of the author

The Budgie's Fierce Fury 978-3-95614-482-0