We all know that they're here. That there are lots of them. That they work for us. And have no papers. Illegals. "we work, were decent, were hard-working, we have a dream." Björn Bickers opening reads like the lyrics of a song. He tells us what it feels like to live in a country where you dont officially exist. The people without papers come from Ukraine, Kurdistan, Ecuador. They are graduates who find themselves making a living by cleaning our houses, moving our furniture, minding our children. "we get caught, we come back, we hide passports, we buy passports, we do the garden.
